Organiser/Planner comments:

Thank you to the small but select group that attended my event, I hope you all enjoyed your run. The control boards that were used in the off-road areas were devised to replace SI control units mainly through fear of vandalism that is apparently commonplace in Priory Park. The villain of the piece was actually control 33 that was sited within an area of woodland in the corner of adjoining fences. I deliberately turned many of the boards round so that the answer couldn't be seen easily from distance. I wanted to simulate the action of punching a normal SI control so that the boards had to be visited at close proximity. Control 33 was in the right place, and the map detail was correct, but it would appear the control was not easily spotted by some. I hope this didn't spoil the runs of those concerned too much.

I hope you all enjoyed stretching your legs across Priory Park and the intricate "alley weaving" through the housing estate to the South. The latter proving to be useful exercise in map rotation as you run, I hope. Some of you will also now be aware there is a pyramid in Reigate! Actually it marks the exit of one of Reigate's cave systems. Congratulations to Ian on winning the event and Keith's close second place considering on arrival his announcement to not want to run! Both, with time in hand, could probably have added to their totals.

Our next mid-week event is also part of the London Park Race Series on 7th July at Morden Hall Park. I hope to see you all there.
